INTRODUCTION

The Thomas C. Power Papers are probably the most significant body of private manuscripts presently held by the Montana Historical Society. The documentation provided by these materials will go far towards supporting historical interpretation of the period 1867-1920 in Montana and the surrounding region. While primarily a business collection, the Power Papers touch so many facets of Montana's formative years that few studies of the era will be complete without consultation of these records. Indeed, an almost complete picture of an emerging, maturing society and economy can be gained through these manuscripts.

The collection came as a gift of the great-grandchildren of Thomas C. Power, Judith Margaret Tobin, Jane Lynn Tobin, and Thomas Benton Tobin, with the support of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Tobin, of Helena. Deposited in March, 1969, the generosity of this donation will be appreciated by scholars and amateur historians for decades to come. It is only through such gifts, that institutions like the Historical Society can exist and that accurate history can be written.

In the years since the papers were donated, the Society searched for the means to get the materials processed and available for research. Hampered by shortages of manpower and funding, the massiveness of the Power manuscripts made this goal impossible for the small permanent staff allowed the Society. In the summer of 1970, sufficient funds were secured to permit Dr. John Hakola, University of Maine, to complete preliminary ordering and inventorying of the papers. With the knowledge gained from this first step, efforts were begun to secure outside funding to complete the task of insuring the accessibility and preservation of the papers. From 1971 to late 1974, approaches were made to several private and governmental sources, seeking grant monies that would allow the hiring of an additional professional staff member and to purchase adequate containers and other materials. This search produced little until the Montana Bicentennial Administration agreed to provide funding for the project; an undertaking significantly different from most of the activities that agency had previously funded. The processing of the Power Papers was seen as a valid expression of the Bicentennial's "Heritage" theme; a method of preserving, clarifying and making accessible a significant segment of the raw materials of the history of the state and region. Hal Stearns and John Barrett, of the State's Bicentennial Administration, deserve thanks for their willingness to support and promote this effort.

The Bicentennial funds were matched by monies from the Thomas Teakle bequest to the Society. Mr. Teakle, a teacher and avid western historian who resided at Spokane, Washington before his death, stipulated that his estate would be used to further the study of Montana's history. We at the Society felt there could be no better application of these funds than to support this project. Mr. Teakle, too, should be appreciatively remembered by all who use this magnificent collection in future years.

The funds secured were sufficient to hire a professional staff member for one year and to purchase some of the materials necessary to house the collection. In June, 1975, Willam Massa, Jr., a graduate of the University of Wisconsin with training at the Historical Society of Wisconsin, began work on the Power manuscripts. Bill Massa's devotion to this project made it possible to complete all of the most significant segments of the collection in the relatively short period of time (and money) available for the job. Without the unpaid hours of overtime which Bill worked, and the efficiency and thought he gave to this effort, the Power Papers would probably still be holding at the letter "C".

During the spring and summer of 1978 the archives staff completed the processing of all the subgroups of the T.C. Power Papers. This second edition of the guide incorporates these new subgroups, with a small amount of reorganization of the original material, to bring together all related manuscripts.

The staff of the Montana Historical Society welcomes the use of this collection and hopes that this guide/inventory will further that goal. Users of this publication are encouraged to contact the Society should any questions arise about the collection, this inventory/index, or other pertinent matters.

Biography:

THOMAS C. POWER

Thomas C. Power was born at Dubuque, Iowa, May 22, 1839, the son of Irish immigrants, Michael W. Power and Catherine McLeer Power. He was raised on the family farm near Dubuque. The eldest of four children, Power contributed heavily to the work on the farm while completing the rudimentary education offered in area schools. In his teens, Power attended Sissinawa Mound College, in Wisconsin, where he studied science and engineering. After three years of study, but without graduating, he returned to his home and taught in rural schools near Peru, Iowa, during the years 1858-1860. In 1860, Thomas Power accepted a job with a survey party for the federal government and spent the next four years surveying for government and private firms in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and eastern Montana. In 1865, he settled in Nebraska, first working as a carpenter, and, in 1866, he became a minor partner in a wholesale merchandising firm supplying several frontier areas.

This investment, and his familiarity with the West, led him, in the following year, to locate at Fort Benton, Montana, head of navigation on the Upper Missouri. With the stock of goods he brought with him, he opened a general mercantile firm in the spring of 1867. His younger brother, John W. Power, followed with a further stock of goods later that spring, and Power's initial company, T. C. Power and Brother was formed.

T. C. Power's firm was ideally located, for not only did it trade with residents of the locality, the military garrison, and Indian tribes of the region, but as head of navigation on the Missouri, Fort Benton offered unique advantages of supply and served as the hub of a freighting network to the towns and camps of the isolated Territory. Power rapidly exploited his situation and, in 1868, began supplementary overland freighting operations while expanding the range and quantity of his merchandise.

T. C. Power and Brother and the other large Fort Benton firm, I. G. Baker and Company, dominated trade and freighting on the northern plains by the mid 1870's. A significant portion of the business of these firms was in the fur and hide trade with Indians of the region and other hunters, an involvement that coincided with the period of slaughter of the northern buffalo herd. The hide trade, and, later, buffalo bones made up many of the down river cargos in the 1870's and early 1880's.

The rapid expansion of the Power and Baker firms caused them to invest in the construction of the river steamer Benton, to supply goods for their operations and to carry gold, silver, hides, and other products down river. This investment, in 1874, resulted in the formation of the Fort Benton Transportation Company and in subsequent years other steamboats were built or purchased to expand this facet of the trade. In the late 1870's, Power purchased Baker's interest in the steamer line and continued its expansion until the firm dominated the Upper Missouri commerce in the years remaining before railroads reached the region and effectively ended river transportation. As an adjunct to his steamer and freighting interests, Power, in 1879, formed the first of several stagecoach lines which served much of northern and central Montana and, eventually, linked with the transcontinental Northern Pacific Railroad at Billings.

While retaining his investments in the Fort Benton area, in 1878, T. C. Power settled permanently in Helena, by then Territorial capital, and later State capital, and rapidly emerging as the focus of Montana's finance and trade. Having centered his business interests at Helena, Power became active in the capital's economic, political and social life. He maintained several commercial firms, built and operated the American National Bank, and speculated in real estate and regional mining companies.

T. C. Power's entrepreneurial interests were extremely broad; he founded or invested in over ninety-five companies in the course of his active career. During the period 1880-1920, in addition to major interests in merchandising and transportation, he invested in cattle and sheep ranching; real estate throughout the northwest; lumbering; coal mining; electric power generation; hotels; automobile distributing; military and reservation supply; agricultural implement sales; banking; grain milling; municipal water supply; metals mining; oil; and irrigation.

An interest in politics paralleled Power's diverse business career. A lifelong Republican, he was an active supporter of the Territorial and State party, as well as contributing to and involving himself in national party affairs. He served as a delegate to the abortive 1884 Constitutional Convention, but chose not to run for the 1889 Convention which resulted in Montana's statehood. Power was defeated in the first state gubernatorial election, in 1889, by Joseph K. Toole, the Democratic candidate. In 1890, he was selected by the divided First State Legislative Assembly as one of four senators, two from each party, to fill Montana's two seats in the nation's upper house. Power and the other Republican chosen, Wilbur Fisk Sanders, were seated by the Republican controlled U.S. Senate over the bitter opposition of the Democratic contenders. Power's service in the Senate, 1890-1895, was creditable, with concentration on the State's major interests: the free coinage of silver; irrigation; the disposal of the public domain; and the wool tariff. T. C. Power's one term in the Senate ended his active involvement in politics.

Thomas C. Power married Mary Flanagan at Dubuque, Iowa, in 1867, just prior to travelling to Montana. The couple had one son, Charles Benton Power. T. C. Power, still in active control of his varied financial interests, died at Helena, Montana, March 16, 1923.

CHARLES BENTON POWER

Charles B. Power was born at Dubuque, Iowa, November 9, 1868, the son of Thomas C. and Mary Flanagan Power. His early life was spent at Fort Benton, Montana, center of his father's financial interests. He moved to Helena with his family in 1878. There he completed his early education in the public schools of the community. In 1888, Power received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., and later completed a supplemental Bachelors degree and a law degree at Columbia University, in 1891 and 1893.

C.B. Power returned to Helena, Montana after completion of his education and entered the practice of law. He joined his father, in 1895, in the management of the Power business interests in Montana and the northwest. In 1923, after his father's death, Power succeeded to ownership and operation of the remaining firms. During his business career, C.B. Power's interests remained primarily in merchandising and real estate, but he also invested in oil, hotels, agriculture and mining.

Power married Mable Larson of Helena, in 1901. The couple had three children, Margaret, Charles B., Jr., and Jane Elizabeth. Mrs. Mable Power died in 1918. In 1944, C.B. Power was remarried to Pauline Ely. Charles Benton Power died at Helena, November 15, 1953.

Scope and Content:

Papers. 1867-1951. 290 linear feet. The Thomas C. Power Papers are arranged into fifteen subgroups: 1) political and personal papers, 2) the records of T.C. Power and Brother and associated companies, 3) the papers of Charles Benton Power, 4) grain, 5) hardware, 6) mercantile, 7) mining, 8) ranching, 9) real estate, 10) transportation, 11) water companies, 12) organizations, 13) Bismarck, North Dakota enterprises, 14) Oregon and Washington enterprises, and miscellaneous unrelated subgroups.

Power's political papers, 1881-1902, document his unsuccessful candidacy for first State governor, in 1889, and more importantly, his term as a United States senator, 1890-1895. Forming the largest segment of the political papers is the general correspondence which reflects issues that affected the livelihood of his constituents: free silver and the wool tariff. Most of this is incoming correspondence with only a few letters of reply from Power. Other questions of interest to Montanans during his term of office were the establishment of better services, such as post offices for rural areas, irrigation, uses of public lands, and requests for political patronage.

The personal papers of Power, 1871-1923, reflect his involvement in the T.C. Power and Brother firm, and his financial investments in other areas. Because Power played such an important role in the administration of T.C. Power and Brother, his correspondence details some of the activity of the holding company, particularly after 1900. His personal investments in mining and real estate, including areas outside of Montana, make up another significant portion of his personal papers. There are also some records for his household expenses.

The largest volume of records are those of T.C. Power and Brother, a holding company whose operations first centered at Fort Benton. Originally the activity of the company focused on steamboating on the Missouri River, supplying merchandise to branch stores, Indian agencies and military posts, cattle ranches, and area residents. Power and Brother later expanded to include mining, stage coach lines, and real estate. Records for the holding company are nearly complete for the period, 1880-1900. Some records, such as outgoing correspondence and financial material, date to the late 1860's. Between 1900 and 1920 there is almost no correspondence in the company's records. Consequently, the personal papers of Thomas C. Power and Charles Benton Power, and those companies in which T.C. Power and Brother had an interest, must be used to fill this gap.

Charles Benton Power's personal records, 1895-1941, like his father's, document his active participation in various aspects of T.C. Power and Brother, as well as his extensive interests outside of Montana. His general correspondence documents the economic reversals of the 1920's and 1930's, particularly as they affected the companies of T.C. Power and Brother.

The various grain, hardware, mercantile, mining, ranching, real estate, transportation, and water company subgroups reflect T.C. Power's and C.B. Power's wide-ranging economic interests. In many ways they represent a cross-section of Montana's economic life during the late 1800's and early 1900's. During the 1800's most of the records of these companies were retained with the T.C. Power and Brother records. After 1900, however, they were kept separately by each company. The difficulty then in dealing with this collection is that the whole Power corporation was not entirely consistent in either of these practices. Consequently a researcher interested in one of these subgroup companies has to look also in T.C. Power and Brother, and in the personal papers of Thomas C. Power and Charles Benton Power.

In addition to their Montana businesses, Thomas and Charles Benton Power were also involved in real estate, irrigation, mercantile, banking, and lumbering operations in Oregon and Washington. These two subgroups have been kept separate from the Montana businesses, but additional material can be found in the T.C. Power and Brother, T.C. Power, and C.B. Power subgroups.

Processing Note:

The arrangement of the T.C. Power Papers closely follows the original ordering given the manuscripts by Power and his employees. Because of the complexity of his investments and consequent overlapping files, some difficulties will be encountered in using the papers. It was felt by the staff, however, that it was desirable that the manuscripts retain something of their original filing to reflect Power's activities, his personal involvement, and the emphasis given the variety of pursuits documented by the manuscripts. It can also be argued that retention of the original order demonstrates the operations of the holding and collateral companies. The user of the papers must rely on the Index to assure that he deals with all of the materials pertinent to his interest. The name-oriented Index is relatively detailed and covers, with two exceptions, all of the subgroups and series in the papers. The exceptions are relatively minor: the letterpress volumes of outgoing correspondence of T.C. Power and Brother, which are arranged chronologically and individually indexed; and the bound financial and miscellany volumes of the several companies, which proved to be impossible to index in a reasonable period of time.
